Here's a date you'll want to mark on your calendar now – July 15. this is Animal Industry Day at Virginia Tech. One of the interesting speakers will be Dr.Don Gilman, Chief Long Range Weather Forecaster, National Meteralogical Center.

If you want to participate in an educational program, eat barbecued spareribs and watermelon, then plan to attend.

Last year the per capita consumption was 193 pounds of red meat. That may sound like a lot, but on a daily basis of edible meat this is 2.9 ounces per day. The recommended daily allowance for adults is 3 to 6 ounces.

Fire Cured Tobacco growers will be receiving a copy of the 1977 Virginia Dark Fired Tobacco Production Guide in the next few days. I think you'll like it. One thing we would like us for you to give us some feedback–should it be published again, how should it be changed? Is it really useful?

There's an experimental total-tree harvester being used in Florida, Georgia, and Louisiana. It is said that this machine can pull a 18-inch diameter pine by the roots, like a carrot. The machine harvests and bunches one to two trees per minute.

The promoters say that by removing the entire tree insects and diseases are reduced and the area is easier to prepare for replanting.

Last Thursday's feeder cattle sale in Lynchburg had 1348 steers and 720 heifers. The steers had an average weight of 586 pounds and brought $38.80. Heifers averaged 489 pounds and sold for $32.68.

Last week an excellent publications was mailed those on our mailing list that make hay. I feel this should be an excellent guide to help get the crop harvested.

Thee are lots of people seeding oats for hay every year. I wonder if anyone ever stops to consider that oat hay is rather inferior feedstuff. It will test about 6.4% crude protein and 56% TDN. On the other hand orchard grass will test 11% or better crude protein and has 50% TDN.

I suppose that I'm really pointing out that there are a number of better choices than oats for hay.

If you are planning to plant corn behind small grain there are several key points to remember:

1. If you take off 20 tons corn silage and eight tons of small grain silage–you'll remove 100 pounds of phosphate and 300 pounds of potash. Keep the soil fertility fairly high.

2. A good lime program is essential. It takes three pounds of lime to neutralize a pound of liquid nitrogen.

3. Since corn is the more valuable crop the double crop system should rotate about the corn and not the small grain. You can expect corn yields to begin dropping after May 15.

* * *

When should corn be replanted? A general rule of thumb is to keep the stand if it has at least 70% of the desired population. The stand should be evenly spaced and an April - May planting. Corn compensates for the skips to some degree; therefore, instead of a 30% yield reduction it may only be 5 to 10%.

If it's mid-June planting, a 50% stand is probably good enough to keep.

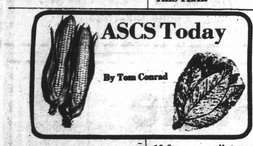
ASCS Today

By Tom Conrad



Flue-Cured Tobacco - In the last few weeks I have talked to several flue-cured tobacco producers who have stopped by the Office to inquire about the proposed changes in the program. The main questions raised have been will acreage allotments be reinstated as a condition of price support and, if so, how will the program be administered.

On March 29, a proposed rule making notice for flue-cured tobacco was published in the Federal Register. It proposes, among other things that acreage allotments within a specified limitation be reinstated as a condition for price support eligibility. If the proposed changes are adopted, producers could plant an acreage equal to or less than 107 percent of their effective farm allotment and retain price support eligibility. An example of this would be that a farm with a 10.00 acres allotment could plant 10.70 acres. If this farm planted more than 10.70 acres it would not be eligible for price support. Producers would be required to report their planted acreage, as in the example of the farm with the 10.9 acres allotment, the producer would be required to certify to the ASCS office how many acres of tobacco were planted. The office would visit a number of farms to assure the accuracy of the producers certification. In making farm visits, measurement variance would be applicable. The larger of 0.1 acre or 5 percent, not to exceed 2.0 acres is the anticipated rule that would be applied to an acreage equal to 107 percent of the effective allotment. To assure correct reporting at the time of certifying to crop acreage, measurement service would be made available to producers for staking an acreage equal to 107 percent of the effective allotment or for measuring tobacco planted. This service would be provided for a nominal fee.

Fire and Sun Tobacco Producers - Fire and sun-cured tobacco producers are reminded that June 1, 1977 is the final date by which fire or sun tobacco can be leased for the 1977 crop year. If you have leasing intentions please initiate these intentions as soon as possible.
